SITTING BULL.

The Career of a Remarkable Savage. Sitting Bull is a Teton-Sioux, and about 41 years of age. He is said to have been a convert of Father De Smet, who taught him to read and write English. Father De Smet kept the Teton-Sioux from the warpath until 1868. He then left the Upper Missouri, and Sitting Bull became a chief.

In 1862 he began to show that bold, defiant spirit and hatred of our race which subsequently placed our nation in mourning. At that time Gen, Henry Morrow was in command of the United States forces at Fort Buford, on the Missouri river. Various depreda-tions were reported in the vicinity of Buford, and these were charged to Sitting Bull. The wily Indian denied all knowledge of these matters. Soon the and one of Bult's warriors was killed. This he declared an unjust act of reprisat, and avowed his intention of avenging the death of the Indian. Gen. Morrow, hearing this, arranged to meet Sitting Bull, and, being convinced that in this instance the settlers were wrong, Morrow pacified him by piling presents on the dead, pursuant to Indian usage, In so doing, however, he created a dangerous enemy. His spirit of independence became known, the bold Indians flocked around him from all quarters, and he soon found himself at the nead of one of the most rowerful and most dangerous bands on the plains. And, as his band increased in strength, Sitting Bull's strogance and ferocity bestone and built a fort on the territory came more marked. He refused to live on a reservation, and went into camp in a wild part of the country on the fellowstone river, and claimed all the land along that stream and its tributaries. Early in the year 1875 some settlers from Montana went down the Yellowclaimed by the Indians. Sitting Bull ordered them aw y. They paid no at-tention to bim, and he sent some men and shut them up in their stockade.

One of Sitting Bull's invaders was killed by the whites; then Sitting Bull retaliated by killing two of the Montanians. This opened a war which lasted until January, 1876. Fort Pense, as the settlers called their inclosure, contained only forty-seven whites, against whom 500 Indians were sent. The siege was complete. For three months the whites kept the savages at bay, during which period six of the number were killed and nice wounded. The provisions at Port Pease gave out and starvation threatened to make anort work of the hardy mountaineers. It was then resolved to send for help, and two men left the fort one night under the cover of darkness and succeeded in reaching For Eilis after a perilous journey on foot on Feb. 20, 1876. The alarm was given, and Gen. Terry, the department commander, ordered that Fort Pease be relieved immediately and at all hazards. Within two days four companies of the Becond United States cavalry, three companies of the Montana multia and 100 friendly Crow Indians were on the march. Sitting Bult withdrew before the troops reached Fort Pease on March 6, without firing a shot. He declared his only desire was to have the country rid of the offensive white man, As soon as the Montaniaus had been taken away Sitting Bull set fire to and destroyed Fort Pease, then returned to his camp. Immediately on the arrival of the half-starved whites at Fort Ellis war was declared against Sitting Bull. He was ordered to sur-render within ten days. He failed to come in and Gens. Crook, Terry and Gibbon, from the departments of the Platte, Dakota and Montana, were sent against him in different directions with heavy columns, and instructed to capture or destroy him and his band. Sitting Bull had gathered his warfiors on the Rosebud, where Gen. Gibbon found him. His camp, which was seven miles long, contained about 8,000 men, women and children, the fighting men numbering about 3,000. The main incident of this campaign was the march of Gen, Custer up the Boseloud, and thence to the Little Big Horn river, where he attacked the Indians in a large village, and on the 25th of May was amous caded and his whole command annihilated. Custer's loss was twelve officers, 247 enlisted men, five civilians, and three Indian scouts, killed, while over fifty others were wounded in the ranks of the forces

Crazy Horse to the south in the direction of the Black Hills. In May, 1877, Gen. Mi es had a fight with Sitting Buil's force on Little Muddy creek, ninety miles from the mouth of Tongue river, surprising and routing the sav-ages, who left fourteen dead on the field, while Miles lost four killed and nine wounded, Sitting Bull soon made his way across the line into Canada, with his whole force, where he has since remained. The total cost of the war waged against him was $2,315,000, and the casualties numbered sixteen officers and 267 enlisted men killed, and two officers and 123 men wounded.

If the year 1879 be taken as a fair test of the matrimonial habits and customs of English people, it would appear that the disproportion in the age between husbands and wives is not very great, and that only in quite exceptional cases either spouse is old enough to be the parent of the other. From the statistics of the Registrar General it seems that they are within a few years' age of one another. Thus the number of men who were themselves between 21 and 30 and who married wives also between 21 and 80, is about 70,000, or very nearly half of the total mamber married during the year. Moreover, of the 12,800 men who married in their nonage, hardly as many as 400 married women of more than 25; while, even among women, the proportion of minors who married old n is quite insignificant. If a rule were in existence prohibiting all marriages between persons one of whom was old enough to be the parent of the other, it would not, as it seems, have prevented more than about 1,000 is of each sex from making thempersons of each sex from making themselves happy. Drawing a line even at 15 years, and supposing that a disparity in age of this amount were a bar to matrimony, it is found that about 2,120 men would have been disqualified from marrying women younger than them-selves, while 101 "mildle aged" women would have been suniarly prevented from bestowing their hands and hearts upon comparatively juvenile cavaliers. Turning from the general tables to those which tell of the widows and widowers, it will be found that the latter usually reach a tolerably-advanced age before they venture for the second time into the hymeneal contract-especially if it is with a widow. From 35 to 55 is the favorite age for widowers to marry widows; and there are almost the same number of bridegrooms found among them at each of the years included in these two decades. Those of the be-reaved husbands who marry spinsters are, however, much younger in their generation, and there are nearly 4,000 of them between the ages of 25 and 35, against only 800 who marry widows.

Talking to Heaven. A mother living not very far from the postoffice in this city, tired with watching over a sick baby, came down stairs for a few seconds' rest. She heard the voice of her little 4-year old girl in the hall by herself, and, carious to know to whom she was talking, stopped a moment at the half-open door. She saw that the little thing had pulled a chair up in front of the telephone, and stood upon it, with the piece pressed against the side of her word. The excuestness of the child showed that she was in no playful mood, and this was the conversation the mother heard, while the tears stood thick in her eyes, the little one carrying on both sides as if she were repeating the answers:

"Well, who's there?" "Is God there?"

"Is Jesus there?"

"Tell Jesus I want to speak to him."

Is that you, Jesus?" "Yes, what is it?" "Our baby is sick, and we want you to let it get well. Won't you, now?" No answer, and statement and ques tion sgain repeated, finally answered by The little one put the car-piece back on its hook, clambered down from her chair, and, with a radiant face, went for mother, who caught her in her arms, The baby, whose life hid been despaired of, began to mend that day and got well.—Elmera Free Press.

The Wagen-Load of Bread.

A party of soldiers, during the late civil war, found themselves one night on a battle-field in charge of a great many wounded soldiers, who, by reason of the sudden retreat of the army, were left wholly without shelter or supplies, Having done their best for the poor fellows-bringing them water from a distant brook, and searching the barversacks of the dead for rations—they began to say to themselves and to one another: "These weak and wounded men must have food or they will die. The army is out of reach, and there is no village for many miles; what are we "Pray to God to send us bread," said

That night, in the midst of the dead and dying, they held a little prayer-meeting, telling the Lord all about the meeting, teling the Lord all about the case, and begging Him to send them bread immediately though from whence it could come the had not the most remote idea. On asking the driver where he came ore, and who sent him, he replied: When I went to bed last night I knew that the army was gone, and I could not sleep for thinking of the poor fellows who always have to stay behind. Some-thing seemed to say to me; 'What wil those peor fellows do for something eat? It came to me so strong that waked up my old wife, and told I what was the matter. We had only little bread in the house, and while wife was making some more I took team and went round to all my nbers, making them get up and give all the bread in their houses, tell them it was for the wounded soldiers of the battle field. When I got home the wagon was full; my wife piled her i-at-ing on the top, and I started off to bring the brend to the boys, feeling just as it the Lord Himself were sending me. Kind Words.

Remerkable Escape.

John Kuhn, of Lafayette, Ind., had a very narrow escape from death. This is his own story: "One year ago I was in the last stages of consumption. Our best physicians gave my case up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not physicians gave my case up. I finally got so low that our doctor said I could not live twenty-four hours. My friends then purchased a bottle of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs, which benefited me. I continued until I took nine bottles. I am now in perfect health having used no other medicine." From the above it is plainly evident that there is a cure for consumption, even in the most hopeles cases, and that cure is Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the lungs. Cures all coughs and colds. Cures all diseases of the lungs and chest. Cures pneumonia and sore and chest. Cures pneumonia and sore throat, and is a sure cure for consumption,
